

Green:

— By Jeff Becker

Building With Sustainable Materials

If any good has come from the recent increase of energy costs, deadly hurricanes, and a snow-less east coast at Christmas, it might very well be that people are now more conscious about the world around them. With words like “global warming” and “dependency on foreign oil” common household terms now, our current “environmental crisis” has brought environmental concerns into public view, and many are working on finding good, honest solutions to these problems. Necessity is the mother of invention, they say, and necessity is bringing some pretty interesting products to the market.